

Using the Pub 4012 Worksheet for Determining Support to Determine Whether a Dependent is a Dependent

Refer to Pub. 4012, page C-7, for the Worksheet for Determining Support or scroll down.

Step 1 of the worksheet calculates the dependent's income used for support as a subtotal of their total income. Not all of their income is to be counted for dependency determination (e.g. putting money into savings for college or a car would not be counted toward income used for the person's own support).

- Include both taxable and nontaxable income and amounts borrowed during the year.
- Don't include funds provided by the state.

Step 2 of the worksheet calculates the total household expenses.

- Household expenses include total rent paid (or the fair rental value of the house), food expenses, utilities (e.g. heat, light, water), repairs, and other expenses.
- Expenses of maintaining a home (e.g. mortgage interest, real estate taxes, insurance) are not included.

Step 3 of the worksheet calculates the dependent's "fair share" of the household expenses and allows you to add any specific expenses for that dependent (e.g. total clothing expenses, education expenses, medical or dental expenses not paid for or reimbursed by insurance, travel and recreation expenses). The total of these is equal to the total cost of the person's support for the year.

The last two sections of the worksheet calculate whether the dependent provided over 50% of their own support and, separately, whether the taxpayer paid over 50% of the support for that person.

You can't claim this person as a dependent unless you can do so under a multiple support agreement, the support test for children of divorced or separated parents, or the special rule for kidnapped children. ### The following items aren't included in total support:

- Federal, state, and local income taxes paid by persons from their own income
- Social Security and Medicare taxes paid by persons from their own income
- Life insurance premiums
- Funeral expenses
- Scholarships received by your child if your child is a student
- Survivors' and Dependents' Educational Assistance payments used for the support of the child who receives them

TANF and other governmental payments. Under proposed Treasury regulations, if you received Temporary Assistance to Needy Families (TANF) payments or other similar payments and used the payment to support another person, those payments are considered support you provided for that person, rather than support provided by the government or other third party.

Social Security benefits. If spouses each receive benefits that are paid by one check made out to both of them, half of the total paid is considered to be for the support of each spouse, unless they can show otherwise. If a child receives Social Security benefits and uses them toward his or her own support, the benefits are considered as provided by the child.

Foster care payments and expenses. Payments you receive for the support of a foster child from a child placement agency are considered support provided by the agency. Similarly, payments you receive for the support of a foster child from a state or county are considered support provided by the state or county.

Armed Forces dependency allotments. The part of the allotment contributed by the government and the part taken out of your military pay are both considered provided by you in figuring whether you provide more than half of the support. If your allotment is used to support persons other than those you name, you can claim them as dependents if they otherwise qualify.

Tax-exempt income. In figuring a person's total support, include tax-exempt income, savings, and borrowed amounts used to support that person. Tax-exempt income includes certain social security benefits, welfare benefits, nontaxable life insurance proceeds, Armed Forces family allotments, nontaxable pensions, and tax-exempt interest.
